Breaking Brick Walls: How local Family History Societies can help

by Alan Beattie, Chair of the Shetland Family History Society

Website: www.shetland-fhs.org.uk

Facebook group: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/614219502528208>

Facebook page: <https://www.facebook.com/ShetlandFamilyHistorySociety>

Bigger is not always better when it comes to breaking brick walls in our research. A small local Family History Society (FHS) may have both the expert advice and records that you require. Alan Beattie is chair of the Shetland FHS, so most of the examples are from Shetland, but the talk was general and the ideas could be transferred to any area in Scotland.

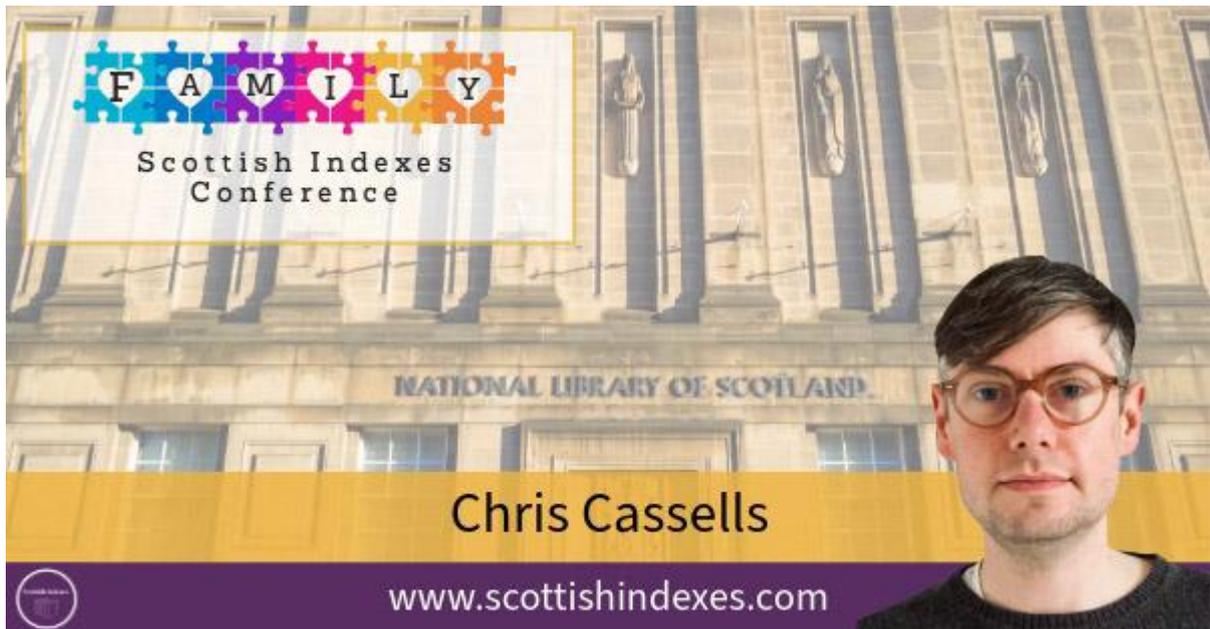

Family History Research at the National Library of Ireland by Steven Skeldon, manager of the Family History Service at the National Library of Ireland

Website: www.nli.ie

Steven Skeldon is the manager of the Family History Service at the National Library of Ireland in Dublin. He is a qualified professional archivist with twelve years experience working in libraries and archives. His career started at the Registers of Scotland providing public access to land records, before moving to the Edinburgh University Library, and latterly to Cork City and County Archives. Steven is an advocate for the profession, a member of the Archives and Records Association, and chairperson of the Genealogy and Local Studies Group in the Library Association of Ireland.

This presentation was an overview of the Family History Service at the National Library of Ireland (NLI), the tools available to search Irish ancestry, and the collections held at the NLI. The talk was primarily aimed at those getting started with Irish connections in their family tree. It is estimated 80,000 people emigrated from Ireland to Scotland in the years 1846 to 1851. The failure of the potato crop and impact of An Gorta Mór, the 'Great Hunger', had a lasting impact on Scotland and Ireland. Descendants of mixed Scottish and Irish populations are also identifiable across the world, with an estimated 5.3 million in the United States alone. The difference in source material and the websites available in Ireland was investigated. The NLI is home to over 12 million items including books, original manuscripts, photographs, maps, drawings and other ephemera. The talk showcased these collections with a family history focus.

Introducing the Archives and Manuscripts of the National Library of Scotland

by Chris Cassells, Head of Archives and Manuscript Collections at the National Library of Scotland

Website: www.nls.uk

Chris Cassells is the Head of Archives and Manuscript Collections at the National Library of Scotland, a position he has held since 2021. He qualified as an archivist in 2011, and earlier in his career worked with business, local authority and university archives. He holds a PhD in Information Studies from the University of Glasgow, is a trustee of the Scottish Council on Archives and sits on the editorial boards of Scottish Archives and Business and Industrial History.

The National Library of Scotland holds one of the country's largest collections of archives and manuscripts, dating from the 9th century to the present day. This presentation provided a broad overview of these collections before focussing on those collections most fertile for genealogical research.

Poor Law Records post-1845 in Glasgow City Archives

by Dr Irene O'Brien, archivist at Glasgow City Archives

Website: <https://www.glasgowlife.org.uk/libraries/city-archives/archive-collections>

Facebook: facebook.com/GlasgowCityArchives

Online catalogue: <https://cityarchives.glasgowlife.org.uk/>

This was a brief guide to poor law archives where you can discover vital clues about your family's history and reveal details of their daily lives. Before you start you should know the following: name of person, where they were born and the approximate year of their birth.

Glasgow City Archives holds the records of the poor law authorities in Glasgow and other areas in the west of Scotland. The poor law authorities began in 1845, becoming Public Assistance in 1930, and ended with the introduction of social security in 1948.

To establish the needs of the applicant and their eligibility, Inspectors of the Poor recorded large amounts of personal data in 'registers of applications' or 'general registers of poor.' Where these records do not survive, other records may assist, e.g. minute books (useful in smaller parishes); printed annual rolls; poor house registers.

Applications and General Registers normally include name of applicant, including maiden name of women, age, sometimes with actual birth date and birthplace. From 1865 it was compulsory including parish of birth in Scotland and county of birth in Ireland from 1865. This detail was often recorded in earlier applications. The religion of the applicant was added in 1865.

Other information includes details of dependents, including children's names, ages, places of birth, marital history, names of applicant's parents and parents-in-law, confirming where born and if still alive and previous addresses.

Glasgow City Archives hold registers for the following areas:

- Glasgow, 1851-1948
- Barony, 1861-1898 (part of Glasgow from 1899)
- Govan, 1876-1930 (part of Glasgow from 1930), and
- Bute, West Dunbartonshire, South Lanarkshire, Renfrewshire (not Paisley), often dating from 1845.

The City Archives has databases of the applications for Glasgow, Barony and Govan to c.1925 and for the County Council areas up to 1900.

Records are generally closed for one hundred years for children and 75 years for adults.

Patients and staff: stories of health and wellbeing

by Lorna Steele-McGinn, Community Engagement Officer for the Highland Archive Service

Website: www.highlifehighland.com/archives-service

Learn with Lorna: youtube.com/playlist

Lorna Steele-McGinn is the Community Engagement Officer for the Highland Archive Service, which has four archive centres across the Highlands of Scotland. Her work involves connecting a wide range of audiences to the diverse historic collections held in these centres through an extensive engagement programme which includes collaborations with schools, adult learning groups, HMP Inverness, care homes and numerous other organisations and individuals. 'Learn With Lorna', her online series of talks about the Highland Archive Service collections, has, to date, over 240 episodes which has led to a High Life Highland award for innovation.

Patients and staff: stories of health and wellbeing

Some of our ancestors may have worked in healthcare but all of our ancestors will have been on the receiving end of it. Lorna uncovered where stories of health and wellbeing can be found in archives, and the Highlands' particular place in medical history.

Researching British Prisoners of War, 1914-1919 and 1939-1946

by Ken Nisbet, Chair of the Scottish Association of Family History Societies (SAFHS)

Website: www.safhs.org.uk

Ken Nisbet was born and educated in Aberdeen. He worked in the travel industry for 43 years, with the last 32 years based in Edinburgh, before retiring in May 2024. In the 1990s, he obtained an honours degree from the Open University and holds a Diploma in Modern Social History Research.

Ken has a particular interest in military history, notably the Great War and 19th-century conflicts. He serves as Chairman of the South of Scotland Branch of the Western Front Association, visits battlefields and cemeteries from the Great War, volunteers for the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, and acts as a speaker and tour guide. Ken compiled the Nairnshire Roll of Honour for the Great War, published by the Scottish Genealogy Society, which also publishes his works on the use of R.C.E.s in family history research and a historical account of the 2nd Battalion 78th Foot (1804–1816).

Researching British Prisoners of War, 1914-1919 and 1939-1946

This talk examined the sources that can be used to research your relatives taken prisoner during the Great War and those taken prisoner by German and Japanese forces in the Second World War. The importance of the Hague and Geneva Conventions was explained and when this was contravened by both the Germans and Japanese in WWII.

Facebook: scottish.indexes

Emma Maxwell is a professional genealogist and co-founder of Scottish Indexes. Since 2001, she and her husband Graham Maxwell have painstakingly indexed thousands of historic Scottish family-history records, making them accessible to researchers around the world.

Her work combines archival rigour with engaging storytelling. Emma has appeared on BBC's "Who Do You Think You Are?" and regularly speaks at major genealogy conferences, where she shares practical methods for turning indexed data into vivid ancestral narratives.

'Using Scottish Indexes: Scotland's Criminal Database'

With over 950,000 entries from seven different types of historical documents, Scotland's Criminal Database is an important resource when you are tracing your family history. In this presentation Emma explained what the different document types are, when each should be consulted, and what information the original documents will tell you. Emma also shared hints and tips on how to use Scotland's Criminal Database.

The former county of Ayrshire is now divided into three local authority areas. We are best able to help members with connections to East Ayrshire but we have access to census and other records for all parishes in Ayrshire and can often assist with enquiries about these other areas.

Volunteers do their best to help members with their research and to direct non-members to sources of information. Members receive three magazines per year and can view digital copies of all back numbers.

Meetings are held in Kilmarnock most weeks and there is a speaker once a month. Visitors are welcome but should email in advance to check details.

Please see our website for information about membership, meetings and publications.

The Central Scotland Family History Society covers the old counties of Clackmannanshire, Stirlingshire and West Perthshire, plus the parishes of Bo'ness and Carriden in West Lothian.

Meetings are held monthly on the 2nd Wednesday from October to May. For the 2022 – 2023 session, we are trying out a mix of meetings - four in-person afternoon meetings and four evening meetings on Zoom from December to March.

There is a monthly “drop-in” Session at St Ninian’s Library in Stirling, when we introduce the fascination of genealogy to new researchers starting out on their journey, and offer advice to anyone suffering from ‘brick wall’ syndrome.

We produce a Journal twice a year, and since lockdown the committee has introduced a monthly newsletter, ‘Share your Story’, to keep members feeling connected to the Society.

We have a full list of our own publications, many of which are now available as pdf downloads – see our website for details of price and ordering.

British Isles Family History Society of Greater Ottawa (BIFHSGO)

The British Isles Family History Society of Greater Ottawa (BIFHSGO) BIFHSGO is the leading Canadian family history society with a focus on the British Isles.

Our members connect with like-minded researchers to learn effective, trusted research methods and best practices, to share their knowledge, and to inspire other family historians with our presentations and publications. Our quarterly journal, Anglo-Celtic Roots, is filled with stories written by our members and provides excellent examples for others researching and writing their own family histories.

BIFHSGO has a Name Index which provides information from our ongoing research on home children, military ancestors, and migration, focusing on British Isles and Canadian ancestry.

Our monthly meetings can be attended in person or online. They are recorded and can be accessed by members following the meeting date. We always welcome visitors and new members.
